

Hundreds of years ago, in a land far away, an old man named Alexander rescued	15
helpless children. Alexander had a very kind heart. He didn't want the children to	29 go without food, clothing, or shelter. Alexander often drove his mule-drawn wagon	42
around the town searching for homeless children to help.	51
On this particular day, Alexander drove his wagon through a very poor village.	64
He saw a little boy and a little girl sitting in an alley. Their clothes were torn, and the	83 children were very dirty. They sat close together and cried.	93
"Why are you crying?" asked Alexander from atop his wagon.	103
"Our mother and father have died. We have no family and nothing to eat," said	118
the little girl.	121
"We are hungry," said the little boy. "Can you help us, Sir?"	133
Alexander told the little boy and girl to climb into his wagon. Alexander took the	148 little boy and girl to his farm in the country. At the farm, they saw dozens of other	166 children busy at work. Out in the field, young boys were cutting down hay. In the	182
barn, young girls were milking cows.	188
"All of these children have lost their parents," Alexander told the little boy and girl.	203
"We all work together so we can eat and keep the farmhouse clean. I find good	219 homes with loving mothers and fathers for most of the boys and girls. I will find a	236 good home for you too. But until we find a good home for you, I must teach you how	255
to work so you can help us keep ourselves fed."	265
The boy and girl were more than happy to work. The little boy ran out into the	282 fields to work with the other boys. The boys were kind and helpful. They taught the	298 little boy how to use a pitchfork. The girl offered to help with the cooking and the	315 dishes. The little boy and girl were very happy in their new home.	328

Hundreds of years ago, in a land far away, an old man named Alexander rescued helpless children. Alexander had a very kind heart. He didn't want the children to go without food, clothing, or shelter. Alexander often drove his mule-drawn wagon around the town searching for homeless children to help.

On this particular day, Alexander drove his wagon through a very poor village. He saw a little boy and a little girl sitting in an alley. Their clothes were torn, and the children were very dirty. They sat close together and cried.

"Why are you crying?" asked Alexander from atop his wagon.

"Our mother and father have died. We have no family and nothing to eat," said the little girl.

"We are hungry," said the little boy. "Can you help us, Sir?"

Alexander told the little boy and girl to climb into his wagon. Alexander took the little boy and girl to his farm in the country. At the farm, they saw dozens of other children busy at work. Out in the field, young boys were cutting down hay. In the barn, young girls were milking cows.

"All of these children have lost their parents," Alexander told the little boy and girl. "We all work together so we can eat and keep the farmhouse clean. I find good homes with loving mothers and fathers for most of the boys and girls. I will find a good home for you too. But until we find a good home for you, I must teach you how to work so you can help us keep ourselves fed."

The boy and girl were more than happy to work. The little boy ran out into the fields to work with the other boys. The boys were kind and helpful. They taught the little boy how to use a pitchfork. The girl offered to help with the cooking and the dishes. The little boy and girl were very happy in their new home.